

Analysis of a sample of the article by the Bureau of Chemistry of this department showed that the product contained resinous plant extract, salicylic acid (1.5 per cent), alcohol (46.8 per cent by volume), and water.

It was alleged in substance in the information that the article was misbranded for the reason that certain statements appearing on the labels of the bottles and cartons falsely and fraudulently represented it as a cure for rheumatism, gout, and neuralgia, when, in truth and in fact, it was not. It was alleged in substance that the article was misbranded for the further reason that certain statements included in the booklet accompanying the article falsely and fraudulently represented it as a treatment, remedy, and cure for rheumatism, and effective as a treatment, remedy, and cure for acute articular, chronic articular, and muscular rheumatism, rheumatism of the head, rheumatism of the neck (torticollis), rheumatism of the lumbar region (lumbago), rheumatism of the chest (pleurodynia), rheumatism of the shoulder (scapulodynia), rheumatism of the abdominal walls, internal rheumatism, neuralgia, and gout; and effective as a constitutional medicine for females, with a peculiar specific action on the circulatory system which renders it invaluable in all cases of insufficient, irregular, and painful functions; and effective as a remedy, treatment, and cure for paralysis and sciatica, when, in truth and in fact, it was not.

On June 16, 1919, the defendant entered a plea of guilty to the information, and the court imposed a fine of $10.

On July 20, 1918, the United States attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, acting upon a report by the Secretary of Agriculture, filed in the District Court of the United States for said district libels praying the seizure and condemnation of 120 cases, each containing 6 cans of tomato pulp, and 1590 cases, each containing 6 cans of tomato pulp, consigned by the Cover Canning Co., Willoughby, Md., remaining unsold in the original unbroken packages at Philadelphia, Pa., alleging that the article had been shipped on or about May 25, 1918, and transported from the State of Maryland into the State of Pennsylvania, and charging adulteration in violation of the Food and Drugs Act. The article was labeled in part, "Tomato Pulp * * * Packed by Cover Canning Co., Willoughby, Md."

Adulteration of the article was alleged in the libels for the reason that it consisted in part of a decomposed vegetable substance.

On January 6, 1919, claimant having consented thereto, judgments of condemnation and forfeiture were entered, and it was ordered by the court that the product should be destroyed by the United States marshal.
